

From: James Reynolds
To: Microsoft ATR,uag@att.state.ut.us@inetgw
Date: 11/20/01 11:26am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Since when does a judge give a killer a light sentence when the killer does not express remorse? And since when does a judge not put a killer in jail who shows an inclination of killing again? I don't see any remorse or indication Microsoft is changing their illegal behavior.

I feel that the breakup order should not have been reversed. That punishment was just and appropriate. Please come up with a punishment just as strong as a breakup. The current settlement will only inconvenience Microsoft a little, and does very little to stop their illegal behavior.

Sorry I can't provide the evidence that Microsoft is still behaving illegally. But it is widely published and easily visible if you start up Windows XP and try to use it for a little while (but don't ever type in your credit card number or soon you will be singing "Where did all my money go?").

Microsoft is greedy and indifferent and will not stop breaking the law unless harshly punished.

--

Thanks:

James E. Reynolds
1030 W. 500 S.
SLC, UT, 84104-1314

801-322-5259